When the sun began to rise in deep red over the wall of mountains the scene was still more grand; the precipitous cliffs of the Geant, bearing up the fortresses of ice, cut the golden sky with their black edges, and while on one side scarcely any light appeared in the sky, the other was in hard relief against its brilliancy. The Dome de Goute, now opposite the sun, was a mass of gorgeous violet colour, which being reflected on the prominences of emerald green ice on the plain before us gave a variety and peculiarity that if correctly described would sound like a magic illusion--itseemed like walking on a huge prism. At half-past 5 they arrived at the Grand Plateau; and then by a precarious staircase, cut in the...
