The only systematic attempt at management of Norway pine on a considerable scale has been made on the Minnesota National Forest, under the Morris Act of June 27, 1902. This act as passed provided that 5 per cent of the total volume of standing timber be left in seed trees. In 1908 an amendment to the bill doubled this percentage. When 5 per cent of the volume was left, there were from 0. 2 to 1. 5 seed trees per average acre, or about 0. 6 seed trees per acre for the area as a whole. Cutting was begun in 1904, but the areas were burned over the same year, so the results from cutting 95 per cent of a Norway pine stand can not be predicted with certainty. Young growth has come in well on two areas where light fire, which cleared out the underbrush, was followed by a good seed crop. Owing to the rather open stand, averaging about 6, 000 board feet per acre, considerable ground cover existed before the logging. Taken as a whole, the natural reproduction is not a success, because not enough seed fell immediately after logging, when the bared soil was in the best condition to receive it. What young growth there is has sprung up as the result of the chance combination of a good seed year with...
